Our team worked well together, stayed connected, and kept the project moving. We communicated clearly, shared tasks fairly, and solved problems as a team. Strong teamwork, good support, and fair task sharing kept us on track.

equally, yet promoting participation enhanced teamwork. Knowledge sharing and support drove better outcomes. While unequal input sometimes narrowed ideas, encouraging involvement strengthened collaboration.

3. What did you learn about working in a team from this project that you will carry into your next group/team experience?

I learned that trust and reliability matter as much as technical skills. Patience and listening to different views build stronger, more supportive teams. Trust and dependability reduce stress and build confidence. I'll carry this, along with patience and openness, into future projects. Strong teams need trust, reliability, and patience. I'll use these lessons to create better balance and collaboration in future work.
